PREFACE

The purpose of this bibliography of Cooperative Extension Service literature is to provide a ready reference source for those interested in the conservation and management of our wildlife, fish and forest resources. Intended users include Extension Specialists, educators, and natural resource managers and administrators at local, state and national levels. However, it is anticipated that the ultimate audiences will be private landowners in both urban and rural environments, target groups of adults (e.g. sportsmen clubs, environmental organizations) and youth (e.g. 4-H, elementary and high school students), and the general public.

The need for this bibliography is rooted in the omnipresent problem of habitat losses in both urban and rural settings, and in opportunities to avoid or mitigate such losses. Wildlife, fish and forests are products of the land just as are cultivated crops and domesticated livestock. Species diversity and distribution make virtually every acre of land and water potential habitat. Although the perceived value of each species may vary with time and place, such values are nonetheless real and may be economic, esthetic, social, ecologic, or recreational in context and scope. To preserve these values requires education and understanding of their worth. This bibliography identifies literature which may be used to achieve that goal.

The literature referenced in this bibliography consists exclusively of that generated by Extension Specialists in each of the forementioned resource areas. These publications have been prepared in keeping with the expressed mission of the Extension Service—public education and assistance in problem solving and decision making. The resultant reference document should alert users as to the availability of existent literature, encourage its use directly, or suggest opportunities for its adaptation and use as conditions and locales change. This will promote more efficient use of published materials and minimize duplication of effort. At the same time, voids in publication needs should become more obvious and provide Specialists with incentives to fill such gaps as circumstances warrant.

A draft and much reduced version of this bibliography was compiled originally for potential users attending the Symposium of Wildlife Management on Private Lands held at Milwaukee, Wisconsin on 3-6 May 1981. A display of Extension literature was deemed appropriate to acquaint attendees with the depth and breadth of available information which could be of assistance to private landowners in the development of land management strategies. Accordingly, a bibliography was compiled to afford interested individuals an opportunity to scan the listings and order desired materials from the Cooperative Extension Services in the respective states.

The initial list was by no means complete. Requests for relevant publications to be displayed at the Symposium were sent by James Miller (Program Leader, Fish and Wildlife, Extension Service, USDA) to fish, wildlife and forestry Extension Specialists in each state. Responses were forwarded directly to me, and with few exceptions (e.g. Sea Grant), all publications were included in the initial compilation. Following the Symposium, the draft bibliography was circulated among fish, wildlife and forestry Extension Specialists in each state for comments on format and to provide a final opportunity for additions, corrections and deletions. A section dealing with 4-H and youth literature was added and new publications incorporated to produce this final product.

I emphasize that no attempt was made to search out or include publications other than those provided by Extension Specialists. This was done to avoid inclusion of out-of-print, outdated, or otherwise unavailable materials. Furthermore, only literature published by Cooperative Extension, or authored by Extension Specialists but published by other sources, is included herein. Although Specialists may distribute other pertinent literature through their offices, such publications did not come under the purview of this bibliography.

In an attempt to increase the utility of this bibliography, each major subject category is begun on a new page wherever practical. Complete sections may therefore be reproduced for use by individuals or groups having specific interests. Such material may be reprinted without permission but credit would be appreciated.

Support for this project was provided by Cooperative Extension Programs and the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, University of Wisconsin-Madison; Natural Resources Unit, Extension Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.; and the Office of Extension Education, Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Department of Interior, Washington, D.C. My gratitude is extended to Sue Dahmen for many retypes of the bibliography; to James Miller for his assistance in all phases of the project; and especially to all Extension Specialists whose outstanding cooperation in submitting materials made the bibliography possible.

CITATION FORMAT

Publications are listed only once according to the most appropriate subject matter, and then alphabetically by author. Exceptions are those sections on Animal Damage Control and 4-H and Youth Literature where references are listed by state, and then alphabetically by publication type (i.e., bulletin, circular, fact sheet, leaflet, etc.) and numerically within the latter. This was done to facilitate reader reviews of extensive series frequently produced by the different states. Otherwise the following apply:

Smith, J. D. 1981. WI

(author, date, state abbreviation; reprinted or revised publications are indicated following the date; publications designed specifically for NATIONAL or REGIONAL application are so designated in place of the state code)

Wildlife Resources
(title of publication)

CES, University of Wisconsin, Madison
(publisher and location; the CES acronym refers to Cooperative Extension Service and AES refers to Agricultural Extension Service)

12 pgs. C-3401. $0.50.
(number of pages, publication identification code, cost of publication; the letters in the publication code generally refer to the following: C - Circular; FS - Fact Sheet; L - Leaflet; N - Note; S - Series);

Note: Some publications originally produced by Extension Specialists in one state have been adapted and distributed by Specialists in other states. In those instances where the original author is not identified, the adapted version is listed in this bibliography under the name of the individual distributing the material.

Unless indicated otherwise, single copies of publications are usually available to residents of the respective states free of charge and may be ordered directly from the Cooperative Extension Services as identified in the citation. Non-residents may ensure a reply of publication availability by enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

WILDLIFE CONSERVATION AND MANAGEMENT

Since the settlement era, intensive and conflicting human uses of land and water have severely altered or destroyed fish and wildlife habitats so that many animal populations have been reduced on local, regional and national levels. Foremost in this regard has been the conversion of native plant communities for agricultural and urban development. Prairies have been plowed, wetlands drained and forested lands often harvested with little regard to fish and wildlife needs. As a result, some species have been extirpated, others have attained endangered status, and some have reached pest proportions. If animal populations are to continue to thrive, immediate and innovative measures must be taken to ensure habitat protection, maintenance and enhancement. A wealth of Extension literature is available precisely for this purpose and is referenced here for use by private landowners and resource managers alike.

Handbook on Prevention and Control of Wildlife Damage by F. Robert Henderson and Edward K. Boggess. Cost $15.00.

This handbook, compiled by F. R. Henderson and E. K. Boggess but with contributions from numerous authors, is the result of a cooperative effort of the Great Plains Agricultural Council and the Cooperative Extension Service at Kansas State University. In 1969, a two-volume wildlife damage control handbook was developed for county Extension workers in Kansas. This work served a useful purpose but needed to be revised. The Great Plains Agricultural Council, through the participants of the semi-annual meeting of Extension wildlife damage control specialists decided to adopt the handbook for the 10 Great Plains states. These states are: North Dakota; South Dakota; Montana; Wyoming; Colorado; New Mexico; Texas; Oklahoma; Kansas; and Nebraska. Wildlife specialists, especially from Cooperative Extension agencies, but including other agency personnel, worked for over one year to review and update this handbook.

The emphasis of this handbook is on prevention of damage rather than killing of wildlife species. The handbook spells out laws of the state and federal government and details of methods of prevention, management, control and limitations of control of problems caused by individuals of most all the wild, native and non-native vertebrate animals in the Great Plains. The Table of Contents is provided here to provide the reader with pertinent details.

This manual contains 43 systematic, progressive lesson plans covering a wide range of subjects from firearms know-how to ethical sportsman behavior to the role of sports hunting in the applied science of wildlife management. The lesson plans and 34 laboratory activities are arranged in 12 units as shown below. Also, there are more than 100 illustrations suitable for duplication to enhance the learning process. The material provides for as much as 150 hours of activities and further student participation is encouraged by the list of 132 references. The manual is suitable for use with veteran sportsmen, youth in schools, 4-H clubs and others. The unit categories from the table of contents are provided as an index to the scope of the manual.

FISH CONSERVATION AND MANAGEMENT

Literally thousands of fish ponds are constructed on private lands in the United States each year. Because of spiralling energy costs and more intensive competition for existing fishing opportunities on public lands, this trend is likely to continue and even accelerate in coming years. Some ponds are excavated while others impound water from surface runoff or existing watercourses. Most are designed specifically for the production of fish or bait, but some are planned to provide wildlife benefits as well. Many ponds never reach their full production potential and are abandoned by disgruntled landowners. Bait producers and other aquaculture enterprises have also suffered setbacks when biologic and economic factors impact upon their operations. In the course of constructing and managing ponds and streams for fish and aquatic life, a variety of problems may be avoided with appropriate use of existing information. The following publications are intended for this purpose.

FOREST CONSERVATION AND MANAGEMENT

Forest ecosystems provide important habitat for a wide variety of wildlife species. Through proper harvest and management strategies, the value of forests to wildlife can be enhanced with little or no economic loss to the landowner. Tree plantings and landscaping in both the rural and urban environments can likewise increase the quantity and quality of habitat available to wildlife. Accordingly, the following publications may provide useful information to private landowners who wish to consider the development, retention, and enhancement of wildlife habitat as legitimate forest management goals.

4-H AND YOUTH LITERATURE

Fish, wildlife and forestry Extension Specialists have major programming responsibilities with 4-H and youth groups in virtually every state. Leader's and member's guides on various aspects of resource conservation and management have been developed to meet the needs of this clientele, but such literature has application to other interest groups as well. Similarly, publications produced in one state may have widespread use in others with little or no modification. Indeed, publications prepared by the Southern Regional 4-H Wildlife Literature Committee are currently being used in precisely this manner.

Alabama (Cooperative Extension Service, Auburn University, Auburn)

Member's Guide/Manual

Leaflet YE-8 (4 pgs.)—Quail Management by D. T. Gardner. 1977.

Leaflet YE-9 (2 pgs.)—Wildlife Den Trees by D. T. Gardner. 1978.

Leaflet YE-10 (2 pgs.)—Fly Casting for 4-H'ers by D. T. Gardner. 1978.

Arkansas (Cooperative Extension Service, University of Arkansas, Little Rock)

Leader's Guide/Manual

G-209 (9 pgs.)—Forestry Exhibit Ideas for 4-H Clubs by D. R. Wallace. 1978.

G-402 (11 pgs.)—Leaders Guide in Forestry by W. L. Smiley. 1970.

S-405 (6 pgs.)—4-H Fish and Fishing by Anonymous. 1978.

Member's Guide/Manual

A-204 (2 pgs.)—How to Use Your Scale Stick by D. R. Wallace and J. E. Miller. 1976.

G-102 (23 pgs.)—Project Book No. 1, Forestry by J. E. Miller. 1977.

G-208 (23 pgs.)—Project Book No. 2, Forestry by W. L. Smiley. 1970.

G-301 (19 pgs.)—Project Book, Forestry Seniors by W. L. Smiley. 1970.

R-301 (11 pgs.)—Angling for a Project? by D. L. Gray. 1978.
